AMERICAN ANCESTRY.

THE purpose of this work is, principally, to register in a convenient and simple form the pedigree of any one person, and thus record for all time many important facts in the history of families which would otherwise be lost. Another primary object is to publish here the ancestry of a person as complete as it is known, as a means of obtaining additional information regarding it. It is also designed to be a convenient work of reference, to show the origin of the various American families. However indifferent some may affect to be regarding this question of ancestry, those who have a good pedigree will usually have a natural pride for it. Many lineages must of necessity contain nothing but simple records of uneventful generations, but they will preserve facts of great interest to descendants which would otherwise in many cases be lost in the history of a family. The plan of the work is somewhat similar in idea to the well-known English works, but altered to suit the conditions of American society, and in detail is as follows:

The surname or family name is given first, with the given name, residence, birthplace, and date of birth. This is followed by remarks of a brief biographical character, giving the principal events in the individual's life, such as occupation, college degrees if any, authorship, public service, experiences, and if married, date, wife's name and parentage, with remarks relating to her ancestry. If the individual whose lineage is given had brothers, the same facts may be stated respecting each of them, in order of their birth, commencing with the eldest. This completes the first generation in tracing back the lineage. Next is given the father's name, followed by same class of facts, and so continued back in male line as far as can be traced. The name of son, father, grandfather, etc., in direct male line are printed in black type. As the abbreviations are all of the most ordinary kind, it is unnecessary to mention them here.

Susannah, who survived him and was living 1691); son of Robert, bp. at Halifax, Eng., Mar. 9, 1605-6, is supposed to have sailed for America in the Winthrop and Saltonstall expedition in 1630, was at Newport, R. I., from 1638 till he removed to Flushing, N. Y., of which he was an original patentee Oct. 10, 1645, he was dead in 1672-3, when his widow Charity, who may have been his second wife, survived, as appears by a document she signed Feb. 6, that year, confirming title to land of "my son Anthony." As to the English Ancestry, Burke states in an early edition of his "Landed Gentry," under the head of de la Feld that Hubertus Feld held lands in Lancashire in the 3d of William 1st, 1069, and that he had probably accompanied the Conqueror to England, also that John held lands in same county in 1112, Robert at a later date not given and John de la Feld in 1254. In the Coucher book of Whalley Abbey, published by the Cheltham Soc., we find a deed of Adam, son of Henry del ffield of a house and land at Falange in Spotland, a suburb of Rochdale, Lancashire, and a quit-claim of Adam's son Robert del ffield, no date is given, but this document is the 62d out of 94, which were executed while the Abbey was at Stanlawe, and this enables us to fix the time approximately, as the building was mostly burnt in 1289, and the Abbey removed to Whalley in 1296. Not long after Adam sold his estate at Falange, we find the family at Sowerby, in Yorkshire, just over the borders of Lancashire, and about 10 miles from Rochdale, and not improbably Adam removed to this place after disposing of his land at Falange, more especially since we find del ffields with this rather unusual Christian name at Sowerby a little later. This last place is in the royal and extensive manor of Wakefield, which is some 30 miles in length, and varies from 6 to 12 in breadth, the existing manor rolls commence about 1300, but are imperfect till 1306, in which year it is recorded that Richard del ffield of Sowerby sued Robert filius de William de Saltonstall. The Fields and Saltonstalls had been neighbors for over 300 years, when Sir Richard Saltonstall got up the well-known expedition to New England with Winthrop. In 1307, Thomas del ffield was a juror, as also was Richard, the latter styled son of Roger del ffield, and probably the same as the above. In 1333 Adam del field of Sowerby is named, and again in 1334 and 1336, in which latter year he is called son of Richard, and held a house and land there. In 1349 another Adam, son of Thomas del ffield of Sowerby, is named. The Fields are continuously named in these rolls as of Sowerby and other places in the neighborhood down to 1650 and later. The name is always written with the prefix "del" till 1412, from which date to 1445 it is sometimes with and sometimes without it, after the latter year the prefix is always dropped, subsequent to 1570, when the spelling of the noun "feld" was modernized into "field" or "feild," the family name is changed in the same way. Robert Field, the emigrant, was son of William of Sowerby, who is so described in the Halifax Parish Registers, where his two eldest children were baptized, but in the baptismal record of this Robert in 1605-6, he is styled of the neighboring township of North Ofram, an explanation of his removal to this place may be found in the fact that his wife, Susan, was dau. of John Midgley of North Ofram, of the ancient family of Midgley of Midgley. They were m. at Halifax June 5, 1591, he was buried there July 24, 1619, and his widow, Susan, Mar. 6, 1622-3.

STARIN, JOHN HENRY of Fultonville, N. Y., and of New York city, b. at Sammonville, N. Y., Aug. 27, 1825, comes of a long line of distinguished ancestors, manager of transportation, freight handler, steamboat proprietor, bank president, railroad director, and inaugurator of the summer cheap excursions, which have proved such a boon to the working classes of New York city, postmaster of Fultonville, N. Y., under Polk's administration, member of Congress for two terms, rapid transit commissioner of the State of New York, member of the committee of "one hundred" of the World's Fair in New York, president of the Saratoga Monument Association, trustee of Union College, N. Y., member of the New England Society, the Holland Society, the N. Y. Chamber of Commerce, the N. Y. Produce Exchange, the Arion Society, the N. Y. Riding Club—of which his son-in-law, Hon. Howard Carroll, is president,—the Lawyers' Club, the Down Town Association of New York city, the Saturday Nights' Club, the Arthur Memorial Association, Knight Templar of the Utica Commandery, honorary member of the Oneida Historical Society, the New Rochelle Yacht Club, the St. Nicholas Society, N. Y. State Agricultural Society, National Association of Horse Breeders, Montgomery County Agricultural Society, New York Jockey Club, American Legion of Honor, Albany Burgesses Corps, The Starin Benevolent Industrial Association of Fultonville and Fonda, N. Y., American Museum of Natural History, New York Athletic Club and many other social and literary organizations. When quite young, he was sent to the primary department of the district school, where he mastered the rudimentary branches of an education, which was continued at the Academy of Esperance, N. Y., thence he removed to Albany, for the purpose of reading with the late Dr. C. C. Yates, changing his mind, however, with reference to his fitness for the medical profession, he resolved upon a mercantile career. His brother, Delancey, engaged him as clerk in his drug store at Fultonville, N. Y. It was not long before he owned it, not long, again, before his restless ambition, strengthened by success, made a bolder move practicable. This was no other than his removal to New York city, for the purpose of manufacturing and selling a valuable proprietary medicine. He accordingly came to that city with his young wife, Laura M. Poole, a niece of a prominent merchant of Fultonville. In a year his success in the new venture was assured, and before long we find him declining an offer of partnership in a leading drug house in New York. When 34 years of age, in 1859, Mr. Starin made the experiment which proved the most important of his fortunes, and was the foundation of his future enterprises. This was the establishment of a general agency for the railroads. A friend provided him with the opportunity of laying his scheme before a prominent railroad official, who was so much struck with it that he immediately made an arrangement with its projector. This agency was from the first a great success. Two years after coming to New York, Mr. Starin had sold one business and was developing another to an extraordinary degree. The War of the Rebellion gave him the opportunity of placing his business capabilities at the service of the Government, and of undertaking the transportation of military stores of all kinds at a great reduction from the rates previously paid. His promptitude on one occasion prevented the loss of a large body of men, at a remote point, from starvation. In nine years from the beginning of his agency business Mr. Starin had made contracts for the handling and lighterage of freight with all the principal railroads running into the city of New York, from which beginnings he continued to advance until now (1890) he is, without question, the largest, individual owner in the carrying trade—including transportation and express companies, both foreign and domestic—in this country. Subsequently, he entered upon the passenger and excursion business, which, it is believed, is now three times more extensive than was that of his railroad agency. A noticeable feature in his life was the very interesting centennial cruise made in the steamer "John H. Starin," whose noble-hearted owner covered the entire expense of the eleven days' trip, the enjoyments of which were participated in by the associates of his younger days and the leading commercial men and statesmen of this and neighboring States. In the same year also, the "Thomas Collyer" of Mr. Starin's fleet made her memorable trip with the Governors of the various States—the guests of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

Both of these trips were in the highest degree successful. The days thus spent will long be remembered by all who were privileged to enjoy them. The famous Glen Island, one of Mr. Starin's hobbies, is beautifully situated opposite New Rochelle, on Long Island Sound. It was formerly called Locust Island. Having first purchased it with a view to a summer residence, the artistic eye of Mr. Starin at once perceived that by industry and by a lavish expenditure of money its natural beauties could be rendered the most eligible of all the places adopted for excursions in the neighborhood of New York. The main island, which contains 50 acres, is shaded by maple and locust trees, and is the site of an elegant mansion formerly occupied by the Prussian consul. There are also four smaller islands. This mansion is the center of unrivaled attractions, and was completed at a cost of $70,000. It is surrounded by lovely grounds, embellished with pretty alcoves and hot-houses, and contains fish-ponds, bathing facilities, bowling alleys, billiard-rooms, etc. Tired citizens find welcome repose and recreation amid such lovely surroundings. This island, moreover, overlooks Long Island Sound—always an interesting contemplation, both from the number and variety of the passing vessels and the exquisite beauty of its shores. Mr. Starin, within the past year, was offered $1,500,000 for the Glen Island property, by an hotel syndicate, which he refused. Mr. Starin is a man of tall and fine presence, with a handsome and a well-poised head. He has, moreover, a genial face, lighted with the kindest eyes, the true index of a noble, tender heart, and delights in kindly and benevolent actions. Such, for example, are the yearly free excursions which he gives to the veterans, the poor women of the Five Points, the police and the newsboys of New York city, kindnesses which have endeared him to the recipients of these generous acts. His tastes, also, are of the most simple and domestic character. He loves country life with its healthy and ever-varying changes; and often, when harassed and worn out with the cares and anxieties of business, he becomes, for the nonce, a second Mecaenas, and flies for rest to his charming country seat, which is situated on a picturesque elevation overlooking the historic village of Fultonville, and commanding long vistas of the classic and beautiful valley of the Mohawk. The house itself is a large structure of brick with marble trimming, having an observatory thirty feet high from the roof of the main building. A farm of fourteen hundred acres surrounds this beautiful mansion, laid out in grounds in the immediate vicinity of the house, which grounds are freely thrown open to the public, many thousand of whom visit it during the year. Mr. Starin's position among the merchant princes of the world has been gained by his well-trained and naturally far-sighted comprehension of his plans, his rapid perception of means to ends, his wonderful method and accuracy, and unflinching persistency. To these qualities should be added high-mindedness and honor, a genial and generous disposition, and a dignity and firmness which insures him the thorough respect and affection of his employees. No man, in fact, was ever more beloved and treated with greater veneration. Nobility and affectionateness of heart, combined with the nicest sense of honor, are the elements in Mr. Starin's character to which his success in life is chiefly to be ascribed. Mr. Starin was elected to the 45th Congress in 1877 by the people of the twentieth congressional district of New York State; and was reelected to the 46th Congress from the same district by an increased vote. The majority was 7,000; and when it is remembered that the district has rarely, if ever, given more than 3,000 Republican majority, the great popularity of Mr. Starin is apparent. Both while in Congress and since, he was the intimate and valued friend of the late Presidents Grant, Garfield and Arthur; and after their elevation to the presidency, he was frequently consulted by them on affairs of great national moment. His advice, on these occasions, was always highly prized and often taken.

Since 1880, Mr. Starin has been the honored president of the "Saratoga Monument Association," having succeeded in that office the late lamented Horatio Seymour. This office, which he fills with rare dignity and honor, is highly congenial to his patriotism, as well as thoroughly consistent with the Revolutionary blood which flows in his veins from his grandfather, a soldier under Washington. In fact, it is extremely doubtful whether that imposing shaft which now marks the site of the surrender of Burgoyne at Schuylerville, would to-day be an accomplished fact to tell in granite and in bronze of the heroic deeds and sufferings of our ancestors, had it not been for the efforts of John H. Starin. He it was who first made the object of the association possible by procuring, while in Congress, an appropriation of $30,000 from the general government for the erection of the monument; while, by his good judgment, sound advice and unswerving and unselfish personal efforts, he has contributed largely to the economical manner in which the funds of the Association have been made to accomplish their purposes. And yet, it is difficult to see how Mr. Starin could act otherwise, coming, as he does, of such good old Revolutionary stock. His grandfather, as will appear hereafter, fought throughout the war for American independence, and was one of the Starin family who served in the Continental army directly under Washington. Again, to Sampson Sammons, the great-great-uncle of Mr. Starin on the maternal side, belongs the honor of having had fired at him the first shot in the war of the Revolution west of the Hudson; while his son, Jacob Sammons, in attempting to erect a liberty-pole at Caughnawaga in 1775, was struck down by a loaded whip in the hands of Col. Guy Johnson, and returned to his father's house bearing upon his body the first scars of the Revolutionary contest in the county of Tryon [see Stone's "Life of Brant," vol. 1, pp. 52, 107]. Jacob Sammons' grandson, moreover, the late Colonel Simeon Sammons of Fonda, N. Y., during our late Civil war, equipped, put in marching order, and conducted to Harper's Ferry 1,100 men in 29 days. When Sammons reached Washington and was asked the usual question what he had come for, instead of expressing, as many did, a desire for easy quarters near the Capitol, he answered, "to fight by—," and as evidence of the sincerity of his purpose and that these were not mere empty words he brought home two bullets in his body. Again, at the springing of a mine in front of Petersburg, he leaped over the parapet and, though his foot was shattered by a bullet, caught the standard and planted it in triumph on the works of the enemy! The celebrated Judge Hendrick or Henry Starin, so well known in Colonial and Revolutionary days throughout the Mohawk valley, was Mr. Starin's great uncle. Henry Starin was a militia officer at the beginning of the Revolutionary war and is said to have been present at the battle of Oriskany, and from that time held the position of colonel of the Tryon county militia during the remainder of the war. He was a plain, honest Dutch farmer living at German Flats, of limited education, but with a large stock of common sense and sound judgment, and, above all, of incorruptible integrity. Hence, soon after the close of the war, he was made a judge. His sense of the inviolability of contracts and the duty of fulfilling them is well illustrated in the amusing but well authenticated incident of his refusing a discharge to an applicant for the benefit of the insolvent act until he had paid all his debts, to be relieved from which, it need hardly be said, was the very object and purpose of the application! The first record we have of any court held within the territory of what is now the county of Oneida, is in October, 1793, when a Court of Common Pleas was held in a barn belonging to Judge Sanger, in the town of New Hartford; and over this court Judge Starin presided, assisted by Justices Sanger and Wetmore. An incident occurred at this session of the court, which is so amusing and illustrative that it is here reproduced substantially as it is related by Tracy. The day was cold and chilly, and the barn, of course, had no appliances for creating artificial warmth. In the absence of these, and with a view of keeping their faculties awake, some of the attending lawyers had induced the sheriff (an impulsive and obliging Irishman, named Colbraith) to procure a jug of whisky, which was quietly circulated around the bar, and from which each one decanted (taking it like oysters raw from the shell) the quantity that would suffice to keep them up to concert pitch. While this was going on, the judges, who were suffering from the cold without any such adventitious relief, consulted together and concluded that rather than freeze in their seats they would adjourn the court until the ensuing day. Just as they were about to announce this conclusion, and to call on the sheriff to make the usual proclamation, the latter sprang up with the jug in his hand, and handing it up to the bench, exclaimed, "Oh, no, no, judge, don't adjourn yet. Take a little gin; that will keep you warm. 'Taint time to adjourn yet!" Tradition says the court yielded to the soft persuasion, and, in the language now common and familiar to our ears "smiled," and proceeded with the business of the court. What sort of justice prevailed during the remainder of that day, the historian of the incident does not tell us, and contemporary tradition is silent on the subject. The late Judge Wm. J. Bacon of Utica, N. Y. (who was the best authority on the subject), also gives, in one of his addresses, the following additional particulars of Judge Starin: "Judge Starin was born about 11 miles below the city of Utica, in the county of Herkimer, which then included within its limits what are now the counties of Oneida, Madison, Oswego, Lewis, Jefferson and St. Lawrence. He was a militia officer at the beginning of the Revolution, and is said to have been present at the battle of Oriskany; and from that time held the position of colonel of the Tryon county militia during the remainder of the war. He had not only good common sense and great integrity, but unflinching courage and loyalty to the cause of the colonies in their endeavor to throw off the yoke of the mother country; and many attempts were made to capture him by the enemy, which, by his great shrewdness and presence of mind, he escaped; but, finally, on one occasion he was surprised by the Indians and shut up in a wigwam over night, his captors proposing to burn him alive the next morning. But in the dead of night he escaped through an opening, and fleeing swiftly he eluded pursuit by taking to the water and following the bed of the stream until, fortunately, finding a canoe among the willows on the bank, he unloosed it, and moving down the stream reached his home safely by noon of that day." Judge Starin was also the author of the celebrated "Yankee Pass," the story regarding which is thus told in Stone's "Life of Brant." The early Dutch of the Mohawk valley were very strict in keeping the Sabbath, and the legal penalties for such infringement were rigorously enforced. Now, it chanced that one Sunday morning, as Judge Starin was going to church, he met a Yankee peddler on horseback, quietly jogging along on his way east. Straightway, the Judge arrested him, and having received from the offender the customary fine, was asked by the latter if—now that the penalty had been paid—he would not give him a pass to travel the remainder of the day, especially as he was in a hurry to finish his journey and did not wish to be delayed? To this seemingly reasonable request the Judge consented, and requested the Yankee (as he had not his glasses by him) to write it out himself and he would sign it. This having been done, the Judge affixed his signature to the document, and the peddler went on his way. Some weeks afterward, the Judge happening to be in Kane's store in Canajoharie, was presented with a sight-draft for $25, which the store-keeper, knowing it to be first-class paper, had purchased. Judge Starin at first was utterly astounded, yet confessed that the signature was his and "no mistake." Finally, after puzzling his brains for several minutes and having had described to him the person who sold the note, he suddenly exclaimed, "Confound it! Its that damned Yankee pass!" However, the Judge enjoying the joke, cheerfully took up the note, but ever more steered clear of Yankees—particularly those seeking passes on the Sabbath day. To sum up: Mr. Starin's character, his acquaintance with business on a large scale, his patriotic instincts, and the generous breadth of his political views, as well as his innate modesty — all indicate his eminent fitness for the highest positions in the gift of the people, whether in his own State or in connection with the Federal government (m. at Fultonville, N. Y., Jan. 27, 1846, to Laura Mears Poole, dau. of John H. Poole of Oriskany, N. Y.); 5th child of Myndert Starin of Glen, Montgomery co., N. Y., b. May 31, 1786 (m. about 1810, to Rachel, dau. of Thos. Sammons of Johnstown, N. Y.). His father gave him a good education, and personally fostered the promising characteristics of the lad. He was the first regular mail carrier in that section of the State, and was also engaged in trading successfully on the frontier. When war was declared against Great Britain, in 1812, although ill at the time of the draft, he refused exemption on that account, and served bravely throughout the war. Four years later he began business at Johnstown; and, in 1819, was so successful that, changing his residence to Fultonville, he ran a flour-mill, distillery, ashery, saw-mill, blacksmith shop, nail factory, and one for the carding, spinning, weaving and cloth dressing by the aid of water-power, supplied by a canal from the Mohawk river. Third child of John Starin, b. Aug. 31, 1754, in the ancient town of Caughnawaga, d. at Glen, N. Y., Feb. 19, 1832 (m. 1780, Jane Wemple, daughter of Hendrick Wemple of Holland). He was an Indian interpreter; fought throughout the war for American independence, and was one of twelve of the Starin family who served in the Continental army directly under Washington. After the war, he kept an inn in the present village of Fultonville, on the south bank of the Mohawk, which was also a kind of halting-place for bands of western Indians who were on their way east to visit their "Great Father" at Philadelphia and afterward at Washington; and often at night the halls of the inn would be so thickly filled with sleeping red-men that "mine host" could hardly pick his way among them. There was also a permanent encampment of Mohawks just beyond the inn, while directly in its front there were several eel-weirs that the Indians had built in the river, one of which is still (1890) plainly to be seen. In 1795, that amiable and philosophical traveler, the Duke de la Rochefoucault Liancourt, on his way east from Niagara, tarried over night at this inn. "The Inn," writes the duke in his travels, "was crowded by people indisposed with the ague, and by Starin's account, numbers of travelers are daily arriving who have not escaped the tainted air of the German district." John Starin also led the choir of the old Caughnawaga Church (erected in 1761) in the Dutch language, when the congregation was under the ministrations of Domine Abraham Van Horn. His nephew, the present John H. Starin, has in his possession the two pew-doors which belonged, respectively, to the Starin and Sammons families. These Mr. Starin keeps as most precious relics and mementoes of "ye olden tyme." He was married as stated above to Jane Wemple (b. December 6, 1756, at Glen, N. Y.), daughter of Hendrick Wemple of Holland, who was born in 1720, and was one of the twelve proprietors of Schenectady, she was one of the Wemple family who, together with the Fondas, Vroomans and Veeders, founded in 1762 the Dutch church at Caughnawaga, which is still (1890) standing. She died at Syracuse, N. Y., Sep. 7, 1841, aged nearly 85 years. She was a very neat old lady, and her grandchildren well recall the short gown (spun and woven by herself) that she wore, and the pocket fastened by a string around her waist, and worn underneath the gown, which had to be pulled up whenever she wanted to reach her pocket. She always carried in it some tid-bit for "the boys." Her memory, to the day of her death, was remarkably retentive; and on a winter's night, while the flames went roaring up the huge chimney, and the fire-light merrily played among the fitches of bacon hanging from the smoked rafters overhead, she would recount to her grandchildren gathered around her many adventures in a newly-settled country, and the sufferings endured by herself and kindred when forced to fly on the approach of the savage hordes of St. Leger; 3d child of Philip Starin, b. at German Flats 1715, d. at German Flats 1797 (m. 1745, Elizabeth, dau. of John Ebertson of Holland); second child of Nicholas Ster, who, taking advantage of the liberal offers made by Queen Anne to settlers, removed either in 1709 or 1710 to German Flats, N. Y. Soon after his arrival he changed his Dutch surname, Ster (Star) to Stern (a word having the same signification in German), and a few years later to that of Starin, though the three names continued to be used interchangeably down to the fourth generation; only child of Johannes Ster, the founder of the Starin family in America. He came over from Holland in one of the Dutch West India Company's vessels as a sailor and landed at New Amsterdam (New York) about 1648. It would appear that he brought with him some means of his own, since he is found soon after his landing giving up a sea-faring life, and engaging in trade with the Indians. About 1670 he removed with his family to Fort Orange (Albany, N. Y.), continuing on a more extensive scale his Indian trade. He died at Fort Orange in 1699.

Thomson Mason of "Hollin Hall," the adjoining estate to "Mount Vernon," son of George Mason of "Gunston," statesman and friend of Washington); son of Burges Ball of "Travellers' Rest" near Fredericksburgh, Va., b. in Lancaster co., Va., July 28, 1749, d. at "Springwood" Mar. 7, 1800, the three-fold cousin of Mary Ball, mother of Washington, and subsequently husband of her gr.-dau., Frances Washington, expended the greater portion of his large private fortune in the cause of liberty (see "House Journal" 26th Congress, report 443, Capt. Porterfield's affidavit in "Richmond Dispatch" May 18 and June 29, 1890, also Hayden's "Virginia Genealogies" in preparation), the friend and lifelong correspondent of Washington (see the latter's letters in "Maternal Ancestry of Washington"), to whom he acted for a short time at the commencement of Revolutionary troubles as volunteer aide without rank or pay, but preferring active duty in the field he resigned this position for a commission in the line, serving at the head of a regiment raised and equipped at his own expense until made prisoner, was with it at capture of Charleston 1780-1, died in straightened circumstances and lies to-day in an unmarked grave on the old "Springwood" plantation embracing the battle-field of "Ball's Bluff" (m. Apr. 7, 1781, Frances Thornton Washington, dau. of Charles [brother of Gen.] Washington, who was one of the signers of the famous "Westmoreland Association" of 1766, the first public resistance to the stamp act [see Mead's "Old Churches" ii, 434], and subsequently a colonel in Continental army); son of Jeduthon Ball, b. at "Bewdley," Va., July 9, 1725, d. herent of the house of Stuart, and hence compelled to leave the kingdom (m. in London July 2, 1638, Hannah Atherold of an old Saxon family). His ancestry is traced in the Downman MSS. through seven generations to William Ball, lord of the manor of Barkham, Berkshire, who d. 1480, but as shown by Mr. Hayden in his "Va. Genealogies" this is probably an error, his arms indicating a Northamptonshire origin. This question, one of interest to the world as involving the descent of Washington, deserves investigation.

ADDENDA.

BRADFORD. In the Bradford lineage given on page 34, William appears as son of Jeremiah, instead of grandson. His father was William of Rocky Hill, Ct., a West India merchant (m. 1782, Elizabeth Sears). Governor Bradford offered manorial privileges in 1630, which patent is still extant and consequently entitled to be lord of the manor. He was son of a William Bradford and grandson of Squire Bradford, living in 1550, a descendant of the old English family of that name. William Henry Bradford has sons: William Henry, Jr., and George Dexter, who are descended, on the maternal side, from Richard d'Exeter, governor of Ireland in 1296, whose descendant, Richard Dexter, came from county Meath, Ireland, to Massachusetts and became the ancestor of the American family; and also from Oloff van Cortlandt, Mayor Dirck Wesselse Ten Broeck, Evert Jansen Wendell, Hendrick van Rensselaer, first patroon of the "lower" manor, Jeremias van Rensselaer, "first director of the colonie," Elder John Prince, Governor Hinckley of New Plymouth, Johannes Cuyler, mayor of Albany (whose grandson was created a baronet, and whose descendant, Sir Charles Henry Johnes Cuyler, is living at St. John's Lodge, co. Herts, England), Bastian Visscher of Horn, Holland, Philip de Trieux, of an old noble family, the Glens, van Burens, van Witbecks, etc.

BURTON. In the Burton lineage, given on page 180, insert in 12th line from top of 2d column that William of Accomack was "son of Robert (m. Feb. 11, 1676, Catharine Cotton, dau. of Rev. Mr. Cotton, the first Church of England missionary to Accomack co.); son of William of Shropshire," etc., and add "that William of Shropshire came to Virginia in 1635."
